SMALL BUSINESSES

MONEY flows like water flows--"It's the basic flow" according to the Incredible String Band song. Basic to all us non-self-supporting people. The farm I live on faces realities such as land and school taxes, needs for capital investment, and insurance premiums just like many other business operations. Exempting the one or two hermits wandering in the deep forest, human beings are participants in an economic system and depend on each other for goods and services. Buckminster Fuller's concept of a consumer as an aware "buyer" who functions regeneratively in the whole world system by selectively purchasing products that improve the quality of life, applies to our local community as well. "The quality of life," huh? --the reader begins to make way for prejudice and opinion's appearance in the text. I like supporting people more than I like supporting corporations.

Alan Coakley

NOTE~ This is our first experiment with advertising, and we have given free ads to all these enterprises. We could not expect them to back a "pig in a poke",... But now, here it is, our newly expanded Roodrinker.

What do you think? WANT TO PLACE AN AD? We think 50¢ per square inch is reasonable. #3 per photo (if we make photo). We can make deals on ads larger than 10 sq. inches, or ads for which we prepare the text and graphics. P.O. Box 161, Canton 13617 386-4852

OLIVER ARMADILLO SAYS:

"It is becoming increasingly apparent that modern industrial humans are losing their fight against nature. The rape of natural resources in a ridiculous game of one-up-manship, is revealing itself as the imprudent policy of a world more concerned with its power of production than the quality of life. Our natural resources are a finite commodity! We must become aware of our every action, and accept each reaction. We must take it upon ourselves to provide everything we need, flowing with nature, not fighting against her.

"The Armadillo Bookstore will help you get it together in any way we can. We have a good selection of books on alternate energy sources, farming, home construction, alternative education resources, and firsthand accounts written by persons who have travelled this road. We will special-order any book for you that we do not have in stock. Hope you will stop in and visit and browse... We even have places to sit down!"

Time was, when...

Time was, when we didn't know there were alternatives.
 Time was, when a big step upward was to move off the farm.
 Time was, when "Well, it's a living" when you worked putting screws into thingamajigs on an assembly line.
 Time was, when you did one thing, and paid others to do everything else for you, and you watched the world happen on T.V.
 Time was, when oil was cheap, and agricultural "scientists" decided soil was just something to hold plants up while you dosed them with oil-derived fertilizers, insecticides, herbicides, fungicides, and the compaction of heavy machines.

And small farmers sold out by the millions,
 And Americans forgot how soil sustains us,
 by its life,
 not its death.

BIRDSTOCK FARM
 WE SELL (or trade) IN SEASON
 Broccoli, cauliflower, sweet corn, cukes, zukes, tomatoes, peas, beans, and lettuce.

And we also forgot about the interconnectedness of all creatures, and the importance of clean open spaces to keep body and soul together.

But times are changing...

and some of us have ceased to despair.
 For there is a fair land where many folks still do it themselves, their own way, and depend on each other, and treat a stranger like a long lost cousin.
 That land is called the North Country,
 And there are other folks, including the staff of this journal, who have discovered that land. We are coming from sterile cement and plastic food "back to the land," because we want to remember what we forgot.
 And though we make lots of mistakes, we are encouraged by what we see growing in our fields in our barns, in our work-places, and in our hearts.
 With each season, we find ourselves more firmly rooted.

BIRDSTOCK FARM
 WE SELL (or trade) YEAR-ROUND:
